Unencumbered by genre, all writing can be assessed by its completeness (the progenitor "C"). Good writing exhibits agency. Fiction, non-fiction, policy analysis, poetry, stage plays, film scripts, marketing copy, technical, legal briefs -- such rubrics indicate direction and intent of a specific piece of writing, whose interpenetrability is merely a function of the writer's zeal and creativity. As the breadth of experiences listed below demonstrates, any of these can be treated as project directives, and executed with the appropriate tonal verve.
