

Greetings,

Throughout most of the nineties, I was involved in the music business. I was a club DJ at several clubs in New York and Connecticut. I had a weekly radio Blues show (You've Got the Blues, on 95.9, The Fox) I was the Director of Music Research for Signature Sound, a leading music licensing and clearance office in New York. Signature Sound had a deal with Polygram Music (now Universal Music) to promote their song catalog for usage in advertising, television and film. I started my own music advisory service, The SoundMarket, to promote specific songs to advertisers. Recently, I have been retooling the site (<http://www.soundmarket.com>) as a destination for musical ideas for creative projects. It is a work in progress.

I was part of the original multimedia /video production team at MLBAM, Major League Baseball's digital company, which includes MLB.com. In addition to the multimedia production work, I wrote and produced the MLB.com Morning Recap Show.

Currently I am studying and performing, and storytelling at the Magnet Theater, and The Upright Citizens Brigade, in New York. I have revamped the SoundMarket website, though it is still a work in progress. And I am pursuing acting opportunities, having worked on several indie productions through my affiliation with the improv theaters mentioned above.
